

New Employee Skit

Directions:

Working in a group of three or four, you will develop a skit in which a new employee finds him or herself in a difficult situation. Examples of situations include conflict with a co-worker, trouble with policies, etiquette mistakes, etc.

1. Invent a situation and write a script for how the situation should play out. Include details about how the difficult situation developed, how the new employee should handle the situation, and what the new employee could have done to avoid the situation in the first place. Every group member should have a role in the skit.
2. You will turn in your skit script and perform your skit for the class.