

Telecommunications Basics

Across

2. Communication (transmission or reception) of voice, data and other signals across a distance
4. An electronic system storing and transferring voice messages
8. Also known as a conference call; is a meeting between different locations occurring by way of special telephone connections
9. Wireless telephones allowing voice and data to be exchanged using radio frequencies or telephone signals
10. Are telephones transmitting pieces of paper electronically through telephone lines
11. Interactive communication between several people at different locations; Is used by large companies on national or global sites; Allows employees from various long distance sites to participate in the same phone call at the same time

Down

1. A conference call involving two or more sites or meeting areas; Is the ability to communicate via video and audio with videoconferencing equipment and the necessary phone lines or broadband (Internet) connections
3. Enables people to send electronic messages with the click of a button; Delivers messages via the Internet in seconds rather than days
5. Electronic Commerce is business or commercial transactions occurring over the Internet
6. Are singular-user or multi-line systems; Transmit voice, data and other signals through the telephone line
7. A private Local Area Network (LAN) for use by everyone within an organization or company